2 Read the text about celebrating Easter in different countries. Then, look at the pictures below and, based on the information from the text, describe them.

Hey, I'm Juan, I'm from Spain.

In Spain, people don't work on Good Friday or Easter Monday. On Good Friday, there are parades with music and special clothes. Sometimes people carry big statues of Jesus Christ or his mother, Mary.

On Easter Saturday, people have a party in the streets. They eat chocolate eggs and marzipan. In the evening, some people go to church. This is a special church service that finishes at midnight. On Easter Sunday, people usually have lunch with their families. They eat lamb or fish and for dessert, they have torrijas. Torrijas are like French toast but they make them with bread, milk, sugar, eggs, and cinnamon. They're delicious!

Hello, I'm Emily and I'm from England.

I live in a small village near London. In England, people have a four-day weekend at Easter. On Easter Sunday, we eat hot cross-buns and give each other chocolate eggs. Actually, we eat a lot of chocolate on this holiday! Sometimes, if the weather is nice, people have an Easter egg hunt in the garden. They hide chocolate eggs and then they look for them. On Easter Monday, there's a big race in Emily's village. It's called the Egg Rolling Race. People roll hard-boiled eggs down a hill and the winner is the person whose egg goes the farthest without breaking. It's a lot of fun!

Hi, my name is Michalina and I'm from Poland.

On Easter Sunday, we have a big breakfast with our families. One special food for this holiday is 'święconka'. It's a basket of food that people take to church on Easter Saturday. The priest blesses it and then we eat it on Sunday morning. In the basket, there is bread, ham, sausage, eggs, salt, and pepper.

We have another popular Easter tradition - we throw water at each other. But we don't do this everywhere in Poland, only in some places. And only boys throw water at girls! I think it's a funny tradition! We also eat a special bread called 'Babka Wielkanocna'. It's a sweet bread with raisins and almonds.

Sophie: Let's go to New York City. I heard the parade there is great.

Lilly: That sounds fun. Are you bringing chocolate eggs?
